Governor Oddie's mode of procedure in appointments to office are in variance to ex-governors of this state. Every man that Nevada's governor has made an officeholder did his best to defeat him in his ambitions to reach the gubernatorial goal. Some even used their newspapers to accomplish his defeat. Evidently the political world is changing. Gratitude is an unknown quantity at the present day. Maybe the governor or believes that these editors elected him to office by opposing his candidacy.

AN UNSUCCESSFUL OPERATION.

The theory that surgery can correct criminal tendencies has been given a severe setback by the case of Jean Thurnherr, sometimes known as Alice Taylor. The girl has been arrested many times for petty thievery. Several months ago she submitted to an operation at the hands of an Oakland surgeon who claimed that her criminal propensities were due to a pressure on her brain caused by a depression of the skull. The surgeon announced that he had removed the pressure and that the girl was cured of kleptomania forever.

A few weeks ago the girl was arrested in Los Angeles on a charge of robbery with very strong evidence against her. For a while even the girl herself was convinced that she was cured of the desire to steal, but it must be admitted by this time that the operation was not a success. The surgeon no doubt made the attempt in good faith and the girl, in submitting to the operation, showed that she was moved by a desire to reform.

It is to be regretted that the attempt was not successful, but there are limitations to modern surgery. It is evident from this case that it can not yet play any important part in the reform of criminals. The surgeon was positive that once the pressure on the girl's brain was removed, she would soon become normal.

But because surgery has failed, there is no reason why Jean Thurnherr should not be given another chance. She proved that she deserved it when she submitted without complaint to an operation that might have proved fatal. She certainly possesses the desire to reform. Now that surgery has been shown impotent in the case of Jean Thurnherr, it is time that religion tried a hand in it. Because the knife has not been able to accomplish this young woman's reformation is no reason why other methods should not be tried before she is admitted a hopeless criminal.

It is evident that the wrong method was taken in the attempt to reform Jean Thurnherr. She was treated as an interesting freak, to be analyzed and corrected in a laboratory, instead of as a human soul. Perhaps if she is considered in the light of an unfortunate young girl, led into evil ways by environment or other causes which the surgeons did not take the trouble of investigating, she might have been helped. At any rate, since the knife has failed, she is entitled to treatment by a little Christian consideration before the case is abandoned.

Ishi, the aborigine, was taken to a vaudeville show the other night and became so interested that he allowed his cigar to go out. This may be taken as evidence that Ishi is not as uncivilized as his captors would make him out to be. Vaudeville is the latest step in the development of the drama, and it must take a more or less civilized person to appreciate it. The baseball park should be the next step in the testing of Ishi, the aborigine. If he yells, "Kill the umpire!" it will be taken as evidence that he is highly civilized and a fake wild man.

It is reported that birds and fish followed a ship containing $1,000,000 worth of sugar all the way across the ocean. You can hardly blame the birds and the fish. With sugar at its present price, a great many consumers would follow a ship containing $1,000,000 worth if they were able to navigate the air or the water.

An Oregon squaw coyly admitted that she has had fourteen husbands, and yet there are some who would claim that the Indians are not getting the benefits of civilization. There is hardly an actress or an heiress who has as many husbands as this happy and simple squaw of the state of Oregon.

It is cheaper to send whisky 18,000 miles than it is to send it 2000 miles, according to press reports. Well, whisky is contrary stuff. It is cheaper still to let it alone.

Italy will probably carve its Thanksgiving Turkey a good many weeks before the people of the United States sit down to enjoy theirs.

MENACE OF CUT-RATE BROKERS.

There are two classes of mining stock brokers—the legitimate, who are the real promoters, and the cut-rate, the parasites who suck the life blood of the industry, living on the success of the legitimate promoters. The cut-rate promoter has no responsibility. He has no interest in the merit and success of the undertakings whose stock he is handling. New promotions that need to be placed on a sound financial basis the cut-rate broker avoids. His mission is not to assist the prospector and mine owner by securing for them needed financial aid, but rather to gather commissions from stock gamblers.

The favorite method of operation of the cut-rate stock broker is to follow a successful legitimate promotion as a gull follows a ship. He places advertisements in the daily papers to both buy and sell these stocks, invariably offering large blocks of stock of a much lower figure than the legitimate promoter offers the treasury shares and, in numerous nefarious ways hinders and hampers the legitimate business of marketing treasury shares, the proceeds from which serve to replenish the mining company's treasury and keep development operations going. Unless this stock can be properly marketed the enterprise must fail.

The collapse of a mining undertaking means loss to those who hold stock in it. Stock jobbing operations that hamper the legitimate marketing of treasury stock aid in the ruin of many worthy promotions. If investors in mining stocks could realize the great amount of harm done to legitimate mining by these cut-rate brokers they would not patronize them. They are the knockers who are responsible for more wrecks of mining than perhaps any other single cause.

You who are considering investing in mining stocks, stop and consider. Look at the matter squarely. You know that no mine can be developed without money. You know that the trading in stocks already sold will contribute nothing further to carry on development. If your intention is to purchase stock as an investment it is to your interests to assist in the floating of treasury stock when its sale is necessary to provide the means for bringing the property to a dividend paying basis. If the mine fails you will be the loser.—Mining and Engineering World.

AN EMBARRASSING POSITION.

The war between Turkey and Italy will be very embarrassing to the British government, for Egypt, which England governs, is nominally a province of the Turkish empire. Egypt adjoins Tripoli, and Alexandria would be the natural point for the debarkation of troops sent from Turkey to expel the Italians. Egypt is also the natural place for assembling Turkish troops, and recruiting the Turkish army from the Moslem tribes of the Soudan and the Libyan desert.

The Egyptian army ostensibly belongs to the military establishment of the sultan. All the native troops are Mohammedans and will naturally sympathize with their co-religionists in their war against Christian aggression. But Egypt is under the strong hand of Great Britain, and the Egyptian army, largely officered by Englishmen, can not engage in the war against Italy unless the British government says the word.

England cannot let loose the army of Egypt against Italy without exciting great indignation throughout Christendom and without showing her sympathy with the infamous government on the banks of the Bosphorus. Should she hold Egypt back from assisting the Turk she will give offense to her Moslem subjects in India. Hence the position of England is one of delicacy and embarrassment.

Sulphite liquor is the latest of those formerly waste products, whose number is now legion, have become profitable, where before their disposal was only a source of expense. Sulphite liquor results as a by-product in the process of preparing wood pulp for paper manufacture, wherein the wood is boiled under pressure, with sulphurous acid or acid sulphite salts. Sulphite pitch, or cell pitch ("selpech" in German), varies from a syrup pitch to a nearly solid tar, and is produced from the evaporation of the sulphite liquors. The sulphite pitch is coming prominently into use in Hungary, Germany and America as a binder for coal briquets, briquetting blast-furnace dust, etc. The treatment is described in a recent bulletin of the United States bureau of mines.

A prospector just come out from the West Shiningtree region, which lies not far from Gowganda, reports between 1000 and 1200 men now in the district. He expresses enthusiasm over the possibilities of the region. The search of the prospectors has extended over a country fourteen miles in extent, extending from the original discovery. The showing, he says, "consists of a vein 50 to 60 feet in width, running through the schist in several places where free gold can be seen with the naked eye."

The committee does not know whether to call the list of edibles for the Taft banquet a menu or a bill of fare. It will probably not matter much as long as there is plenty on the board. Food by any other name will digest as easily, as Mr. Shakespeare did not remark.

Colonel Green's ideal of a wife appears to be a woman who will save him the wages of a cook and a chambermaid. Evidently he is a true son of his mother. Mrs. Hetty Green is the tightest wad and one of the richest women in the country.

An Oakland man bought $13,000,000 worth of railroads for $200. This is a marking down that the most enterprising department store will find some trouble in competing with.

A San Jose man who followed every gold rush for decades finally came into a fortune by inheritance. After all, the surest and easiest way to make a fortune is to inherit it.

Jack Johnson announces that he is not broke. He has a toothache. It is hard to tell which of these two evils would be considered preferable.

PROGRAM FOR
TO-NIGHT IS SPLENDID

The program tonight is a splendid one and worthy of attention. The heating of the theater is complete, so patrons may feel assured they will enjoy one hour and ten minutes of real moving pictures in a warm and comfortable house. "The Wheels of Justice," a Selig drama, is a very pathetic picture, well acted, well photographed and well staged. "Max's Divorce Case" contains some very laughable scenes. "The Regeneration of the Apache Kid" is an Indian drama taken at one of the Indian schools in California. "A Daughter of the South," a very interesting patriotic picture is the feature for the evening. Miss Carreg and Mr. Avenue will be heard at each show in new songs.
